WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

- *** High Risk of significant fires due to gusty N to E winds/low RH today into early Friday for our driest PSA's ***
- *** Local areas of gusty winds/low RH North Coast PSA today ***
- *** High Risk of significant fires due to gusty N to E winds/low RH again Sunday Sacramento Valley/Foothills and western Sierra Slopes ***
- High pressure will continue to dominate our weather for another week at least. A few weak weather systems passing by to our north will occasionally weaken the high somewhat.
- Low afternoon RH (5-15%) and poor overnight recovery (less than 25% with some locations less than 15%) will continue into Saturday at least. Windy areas will be the driest.
- Gusty N to E winds will continue into early Friday. Peak gusts of 25-40 mph are expected, with local areas of gusts 45-50 mph this morning, all decreasing somewhat this afternoon. High Risk of Significant Fire in the windy dry areas will continue into Friday morning for these PSA's: Sacramento Valley/Foothills, Mid Coast to Mendocino, western slopes of Northern Sierra, and both Bay Area PSA's. Areas with wind/low RH in the North Coast PSA do not seem quite wide spread enough to warrant High Risk designation there today.
- Gusty N to E winds will return around midnight Sunday through the morning with Peak gusts of 20-30 mph expected. Thus, High Risk of Significant Fire for wind and low RH is also in place for the Sacramento Valley/Foothills and western slopes of Northern Sierra Sunday.
- Winds Friday through Saturday afternoon will be quite light all areas, then again Monday onward well into next week.
- Afternoon temperatures will generally be 5-10 degrees above seasonal normals for the next week with our warmest inland areas mostly in the mid 70s.
- At this time, no rain is expected in the North Ops region over the next 7 days.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

- A couple of troughs will drop into the Desert Southwest from Canada through this weekend. A ridge of high pressure off the California Coast will move inland early next week. This ridge will weaken by the middle of next week.
- Northeast winds will increase throughout the day over the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California and peak tonight through Friday morning when winds will be 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph. Winds will decrease Friday afternoon and become light by Saturday morning.
- Another round of northeast winds will increase Sunday and peak Sunday night through Monday morning over the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California. With this event, winds will peak in the 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph range. Winds will decrease Monday afternoon, but locally gusty offshore winds will continue into the middle of next week.
- Minimum humidity will be in the single digits and there will be poor humidity recovery at night through the middle of next week.
- Temperatures will be near normal across the valleys and 5 to 10 degrees below normal across the mountains and deserts through this weekend. Maximum temperatures will be in the upper 40s and 50s across the mountains and 70s to low 80s in the valleys.
- Temperatures will warm to near normal across the mountains and deserts and around 5 degrees above normal in the valleys Monday through the middle of next week.
